

In a peaceful forest, there lived a wise old owl named Magnus. His home was a hollow in a towering oak tree, filled with the rustling sounds of leaves and the soft hoots of his kin. Magnus had a special bond with the forest. He could feel its pulse, its rhythm, its silent whispers.

One day, while perched on his favorite branch, Magnus found a fallen feather. It was delicate and beautiful, shimmering in hues of blue and silver. As he held it close, he could hear the feather whispering tales of the sky.

The feather spoke of the vast expanse of the blue yonder, of the freedom of flight, of the thrill of soaring above the clouds. It told him about the dance of the wind, the warmth of the sun, the chill of the rain.

Magnus was deeply moved by these tales. He realized that the sky was more than just a canvas of blue, it was a world full of wonder and adventure. He understood that his role as an owl was not just to live in the forest, but to explore the sky.

From that day, Magnus saw the sky in a new light. It was not just a vast expanse of blue, but a living, breathing entity, full of life and stories. He understood that every flight, every glide, every swoop was a part of the sky's endless narrative.

And so, Magnus continued his life as an owl, with a newfound respect and love for the sky. His flights were not just a means to hunt, but also a way to listen to the tales of the sky, each one a reminder of the beauty and mystery of the world above.

Multiple Choice Questions:

- 1 What was Magnus? a. A sparrow b. An eagle c. An owl d. A crow
- 2 What did Magnus find one day? a. A fallen feather b. A shiny pebble c. A lost nest d. A broken twig
- 3 What did the feather tell Magnus about? a. The forest b. The sky c. The land d. The sea
- 4 What did Magnus realize about the sky? a. It is unreachable b. It is a world full of wonder and adventure c. It is empty d. It is predictable
- 5 What did Magnus understand his role as an owl to be? a. To live in the forest b. To explore the sky c. To hunt d. To sleep

Fill-in-the-blank Questions:

- 1 Magnus was a wise old _____ in a peaceful forest.
- 2 One day, Magnus found a fallen _____.
- 3 The feather told Magnus about the _____.
- 4 Magnus realized that the sky was a world full of _____ and adventure.
- 5 Magnus understood that every flight, every glide, every swoop was a part of the sky's _____ narrative.